WARNS ON LOSS OF GOOD WILL IF DRIVES COMPETE

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, who conferred in Israel with Prime Minister Ben Gurion, stated in New York that:

1) There is complete accord between Zionist leaders and Prime Minister Ben Gurion on the future role of the World Zionist Movement. A bill will go before the Knesset shortly granting the Zionist Movement authority to coordinate the activities of all Jewish organizations operating in Israel in the spheres of immigration, absorption and colonization. 2) The Jewish Agency executive and the Israel Government are agreed that efforts must be made to avoid friction and competition between campaigns for Israel in the United States. 3) A global conference of Zionist and Jewish intellectual leaders, writers, scholars, thinkers and publicists will be held in the near future, probably in Israel, to discuss the status of world Jewry in light of the rebirth and development of the Jewish State.

Dr. Goldmann reported complete agreement with Prime Minister Ben Gurion on the draft of a bill to the Knesset recognizing the World executive as the official body in Israel to direct activities in the spheres of immigration, absorption, colonization and to coordinate in Israel the activities of other Jewish organizations in these fields. The bill is the outcome of a resolution adopted at the 23rd Zionist Congress in Jerusalem last August which asked the Israel Government to pass a bill through the Knesset granting the Zionist Organization such status in Israel. The draft of the bill was approved by the Jewish Agency executive at its plenary session.

Dr. Goldmann scoffed at rumors that the Israel Government had withdrawn the agreement for [illegible] before the Zionist Congress. He said that while certain concepts in the Congress' resolution were omitted from the draft bill, the essential meaning of status remains unaltered. He said the draft bill expressed the desirability of establishing a united front of all sections of the Jewish people including non-Zionists who are interested in aiding the development of Israel. "Far from being imposed on the Zionist Movement, this principle," Dr. Goldmann said, "is in line with old established Zionist policy." He expressed the hope that the status bill would be quickly approved by the Government and introduced into the Knesset "where naturally the various parties will have an opportunity to make certain changes if they wish."

The plenary session dealt also, Dr. Goldmann said, with the situation regarding fund raising for Israel in the United States and reached the unanimous conclusion that "both U.J.A. and the Bond issue are vital sources of income for Israel and would remain so for quite some time. In order to develop both activities to a maximum and secure the best possible results for Israel, the Jewish Agency executive and the Israel Government feel strongly that the two campaigns must be carefully coordinated, in order to avoid competition and the resultant loss of good will for themselves and Israel."

Dr. Goldmann said that the executive decided to call what will be probably the first conference of its kind of world Zionist and Jewish intellectual leaders from all walks of life to consider the tasks and problems facing Jewry as a result of the establishment of the State of Israel. This conference may take place sometime this summer probably in Israel, Dr. Goldmann said. It is expected to serve as a basis for decisions to be adopted later by the Zionist executive, and the Zionist Actions Committee meeting on May 7.

The plenary session dealt also with Israel's immigration policy for the current year and with budget revisions resulting from the new exchange rates in Israel. The principle of selective immigration to Israel, adopted by the Jewish Agency at the end of last year, will be followed, Dr. Goldmann said. He stressed, however, that this policy applies only to immigrants brought to Israel at the expense of the Jewish Agency, and is not even done [illegible] where the Jewish population is in immediate danger.

The budget revisions, he said, will have no major effect on the scope of activities of various departments or on portions of the budget alloted to them. Dr. Goldmann said that certain sums will be allocated to increase the absorptive capacity of settlements for religious children and youths brought to Israel by the Youth Aliyah. Funds have also been assigned for the improvement of housing facilities for technicians and professionals who come to Israel from America or Western European countries.

Suspend Talks With Germany On Claims

The negotiations between representatives of Israel and the West German Republic were suspended following the return to The Hague of the German delegation from a series of conferences with the authorities in Bonn. The Israel delegation stated that the German statement approving only $750,000,000 of the Israel claim for $1,000,000,000 dollars was unsatisfactory, and reported to this effect to the Israel Government in Tel Aviv for consideration and decision. It was emphasized that the Israel delegation was not empowered to break off negotiation with the Germans but that there would be a suspension until the Israel Government makes its decision.

The Israel claim for a billion dollars from West Germany is part of a total claim of $1,500,000,000 from all of Germany, the $500,000,000 remaining being claimed from Eastern Germany. The German delegation stated that while it accepted the number of 500 thousand victims of Nazi destruction and persecution as correct it could not accept the figure of $3,000 per person as the sum needed to rehabilitate each individual.

Another factor which has served to increase the seriousness of the suspension is the German contention that even with the lower figure submitted by the German delegation this figure would have to be considered in connection with other German debts. According to the Israel delegation the Germans thus admit that the actual sum to be paid is bound to be far smaller than the sum recognized as the debt. It also means that the system of payment will be by quotas such as is being arranged for other countries at the London Conference. It is expected by German circles that it will be made clear that the Germans would make a special effort to meet Israel's claims. It was felt that the mode of payment might be coordinated with the payment of other debts but not that the debt itself would be coordinated with debts contracted at the London Conference. The German delegation claims that the present economic and financial situation in Germany makes it impossible for them to make any recommendation as to the time and method of payment of the debt.

Figures of Germany's economy show, however, that there are phenomenal increases in agricultural and industrial production and in foreign trade. In 1947, Germany exported $225,000,000 worth of goods. Four years later in 1951, Germany exported almost $4,000,000,000 in goods. While imports rose considerably during that period, there is today a gap of only $500,000,000 between imports and exports which is steadily decreasing. In addition Germany has credit with foreign banks in foreign currency of almost a billion and a half German marks, practically double the sum held in 1949. Within two years, between 1946 and 1950, Germany's gross national income rose by over ten billion marks, and in one year deposits in German banks rose by almost 100 percent.

Some of the outstanding advances made in industrial production are shown in the differences between 1948 as a base year of 100 and the second quarter of 1951 with an index of 232. In agriculture the rise has been equally as rapid. In 1948 there were 1,950,000 metric tons of wheat harvested and a year later in 1950 there were 2,614,000 metric tons harvested. Comparable increases were registered in such crops as rye, and sugar beets. Most of the major increases in Germany's economy were recorded during a period when restrictions were imposed by the occupying powers on German production. These restrictions were removed in April, 1950, and the increase in production for internal consumption as well as for export is proceeding along lines of geometric progression.

Until the Israel Government reviews the present phase of the negotiations it is not anticipated that there will be any further meetings of the two groups. However, the German Delegation is continuing to meet with representatives of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims against Germany which is asking $500,000,000 dollars from the West German Government on behalf of Jewish groups outside of Israel.

Says Migrants Bring Diseases To Israel

Dr. Brock Chisholm, director general of the United Nations World Health Organization, reported in New York that the loyalty and devotion of Israel's inhabitants would offset its current economic disadvantages. The country's internal tensions would be resolved, Dr. Chisholm said, after "a painstaking process of integration," but he saw little hope that it might become a completely healthy land in the near future. He ascribed this to the great diversity of persons who had emigrated to Israel with the diseases "of different centuries."

In his first public address in the U.S. since his return from a two-month worldwide tour, Dr. Chisholm told an audience of 500 at the Academy of Medicine, 2 East 103d Street, that Israel had shown courage in seeking to eliminate goats, says the New York Times. He called the goat and malaria the two "great agents of destruction" in subtropical lands such as Israel. The goat was held destructive of both soil and vegetation.

Dr. Chisholm said that while Israel welcomed the assistance of the United Nations agency, the health program was directed from within the Government. The meeting was under the auspices of the national board of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, and the Medical Advisory Board.

Seminary Lacks Cash, May Close

[illegible] Wednesday [illegible] Sharon, may have to [illegible] in June if its accumulated deficit of $324,827 is not erased by that time, Rabbi Bernard D. Marton, provost and executive vice-president, told the New York Herald Tribune.

So hard pressed is the seminary for funds that the means of resident students have been reduced. The seminary, now in its thirty-eighth year, has more than 1,500 students from twenty-eight countries. Its annual budget is $750,000, raised from donations, tuition fees and proceeds from an annual dinner held each January.

The deficit, Rabbi Marton said, includes $60,000 in unpaid food bills and a substantial part of the remainder for thirteen weeks' wages for 104 members of the staff. Of its 1,500 students, it was explained, about 300 live in the seminary dormitories where they are also fed. Because of the straitened financial situation, said Rabbi Marton, meat was taken off the students' menus in the seminary dining room beginning March 31.

Appeals for help have brought some response in the way of commodities, said Rabbi Marton, but more than anything the institution needs hard cash. The Kosher Butchers Union, it was understood, has donated 1,000 pounds of chick-

Cautions Prejudice Is Peril To Freedom

Roger W. Straus, co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said in New York that freedom cannot be preserved so long as prejudice exists. Prejudice because of religion, color or national origin assists Communism, he said, and the free world will be strong enough to fight Soviet onslaughts "to the extent that we practice brotherhood."

Mr. Straus spoke at a New York rally of the Metropolitan Conference of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods at which he received the conference's annual Man-of-the-Year Award. The meeting was held at Central Synagogue, Lexington Avenue and 55th Street. Mr. Straus, honorary president of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods and its first president, is president of the American Smelting & Refining Company.

Emphasizing that prejudice is not a one-way street, Mr. Straus said that just as Catholics and Protestants must drop their dislike of Jews, so Jews must "make cer-

Thousands Visit Mount Zion Memorial To Jews Slain By Nazis

Thousands of Jewish pilgrims climbed the hill from the New City of Jerusalem to Mount Zion. After praying at King David's tomb, which is the symbol of resurrection and light, they passed on to the unfinished memorial to the destruction of the Jews of the Diaspora, a symbol of darkness, says the New York Times.

The most important room of the memorial is a low-vaulted, damp and windowless cellar known as the Grave of the Unknown Martyr. Here thirty jars containing the ashes of Jews exterminated in Nazi camps are arranged on one side as though on an altar. The jars are striped blue and white, with a red spot on the center of each.

Above, on a board, are listed the names of the camps and on the wall is written, "I believe in the resurrection of the dead."

Beneath the inscription is a glass cabinet in which are displayed several more jars and small caskets with ashes, poison gas container and a bowl with pieces of a dark, greenish-brown soap that is said to have been made out of the bodies of Jews in the extermination camps. From the ceiling hangs a candelabrum holding six candles symbolizing the 6,000,000 Jews killed by the Nazis.

All day, Israeli and foreign pilgrims stood speechless in the little room of the ashes, then shuffled through the half darkness to adjoining rooms where desecrated scrolls from European synagogues are being gathered.

Here are shoe soles, shopping bags, a theatre costume and a drum which the Nazis made out of Holy Scrolls. The [illegible] also are mandments in Hebrew, is said to have been played by the Nazis in the ruins of the Warsaw Ghetto after the abortive revolt toward the end of the war.

Also in this room is a prayer book for which concentration camp inmates had written two melodies in blood because they had no ink.

Memorial services are held eight times a year in this room for the men, women and children murdered and for the holy objects destroyed by the Nazis. The theme of the service is a warning to all peoples of the earth that they live in a time when whole peoples can be wiped out, says the Times.

Other rooms included one devoted to the Old City of Jerusalem with pictures of destroyed synagogues and a small stone from the Wailing Wall.

Passing through a courtyard, Passover pilgrims entered a second building containing holy objects salvaged from synagogues. Many of the candelabra salvaged from Europe have been passed on to synagogues in Israel but sixteen are kept here. In the Hanukkah season representatives of various destroyed Jewish communities in Europe light the sixteen candelabra to represent the resurrection of their communities in the Holy Land.

Near by, pilgrims viewed two more structures. In the first the Mount Zion committee is preparing fifty little memorial rooms, each devoted to one of the fifty synagogues of Europe that have some special significance in Jewish life. The second is a furnace—the greatest expression of Jewish martyrdom. Once yearly, in December, a fire is lit in the furnace [illegible]

New Mineral Finds Help Israel

The news about copper from the little mining camp of Be' or Ora in Israel meant that King Solomon's mines would yield their treasure again for the new state of Israel. On the basis of resources established in the last few weeks, the Israel Mining Company has begun forming a subsidiary for commercial exploitation. In the next few weeks company officials hope to begin ordering equipment from abroad. Some will come from the United States, but officials hope that some will be delivered by West Germany as reparations.

The New York Times correspondent watched sweating miners, stripped to the waist, drilling a tunnel at the base of a craggy mountain, five miles outside the mining camp. On the other side of the mountain another crew of miners started to dig toward the first crew. Eventually the two tunnels will meet.

[illegible] is a typical setting in the rolling or utterly barren mountains with canyons of yellow and pink Nubian sandstone eroded into fantastic shapes by centuries of wind, sand and rain. One may imagine monsters or the ruins of fabled temples. Strangest of all are piles of black slag to be seen in some of the canyons — known here as wadis. These heaps are the traces of King Solomon's mines. Indications are that King Solomon's miners did not dig underground shafts but only scraped the surface where they found ore of sufficiently high quality to smelt with charcoal made from oak trees.

The new Israeli mines, using greater quantities and hence lower qualities of ore, probably will employ electrolysis in processing their copper. The copper will be shipped north for Israel's own industries and for export.

Discoveries of new mineral deposits in the Negeb Desert have enabled the Israeli Government to advance by three years its objective for economic self-sufficiency. The date set last year was 1961 but the Minister of Agriculture, Levi Eshkol, said in an interview that all trade gaps would be liquidated by 1958.

Mr. Eshkol's calculations take into account only the exploitation of phosphates, copper, manganese, iron and kaolin in the Negeb, as well as potash in the Dead Sea, all of which have been tapped already. He did not figure on such minerals as sulphur, which has been discovered but not yet tapped, or oil, drilling for which has not yet begun. If oil were struck or if additional mineral deposits were found, the situation would improve further.

The development of mineral resources will be financed from the proceeds from "independence" bonds being floated in the United States and from foreign grants, private investment and reparations funds expected from West Germany.

Opera Stars Are Wed

Robert Merrill and Roberta Peters, both stars of the Metropolitan Opera, were married in the Park Avenue Synagogue, at 50 E. 87th Street, New York. The single-ring ceremony was conducted by Rabbi David Putterman in the presence of 1,000 guests, including officers and artists of the Metropolitan Opera. A crowd of 2,000 outside the synagogue cheered their arrival and departure.

Mr. Merrill was delayed more than half an hour in his arrival by a parade on Fifth Avenue and had to walk the last block.

After the thirty-year-old bridegroom and his twenty-one-year-old bride had taken their vows, Rabbi Putterman addressed them briefly: "The two of you have been blessed by God with an art inexplicable to man. In every ritual of Jewish life there is song. No faith can last that does not sing."

The bride wore a brocaded Swiss organdie dress with pleated tiers. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids and her veil was held in place by a circlet of lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by Miss Eleanor Ross, a singer, as maid of honor. The best man was Gilbert Merrill, brother of the bridegroom. Also in attendance were the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Peters, and Mr. Merrill's mother, Mrs. Lillian Merrill.

Among the guests were Mrs. August Belmont, a patron of the Metropolitan; Lowell Wadmond, president; George A. Sloan, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and Mrs. Sloan; John Mundy, orchestra manager, and Mrs. Mundy; and singers Jan Peerce, Lucia Albanese, and her husband, Joseph Gimma, Lucine Amara, Martha Lipton and Richard Tucker.

A reception in the synagogue followed the wedding. Mr. Merrill sang that night in "Aida," after which they left on a three-day wedding trip to an undisclosed destination. They plan a longer trip in July and August.

BOY PIANIST ACCLAIMED FOR RARE TALENT

Paul Weinlander, fourteen-year-old pianist, played at Town Hall in New York at a Bach program that in both its scope and its quality of performance would have done credit to any veteran. He played twenty-four Preludes and Fugues of J. S. Bach clear through, with breaks for a rest between the three groups of eight.

The New York Times says: This boy is of extraordinary talent; it is not the genre of the prodigy, where a mysterious or inexplicable quality pervades the performance. In the playing of young Weinlander all is explainable, by intelligence, by study and care, and by the presence of a very musically gifted personality. But it is very rare and unusual, just the same, to find these attributes so well under control and so well used as in these sturdy young hands. Such technique, tone and musical intelligence as this should surely be a firm basis on which a fine musician will grow to maturity.

The Great Jewish Books

BY DR. THEODORE N. LEWIS, RABBI OF THE PROGRESSIVE SYNAGOGUE, NEW YORK

"The Great Jewish Books" was edited by Samuel Caplan, editor, and Harold Ribalow, managing editor of Congress Weekly, organ of the American Jewish Congress. "The Great Jewish Books" is an exciting and informing volume. Though acquainted—and in most instances intimately—with the books, yet I found the contents fascinating reading. While some may wish the list increased, none will deny greatness to The Bible, The Siddur (Prayer Book), The Kusari, The Talmud; Maimonides' Guide to the Perplexed, Rashi's Commentaries, The Zohar, The Shulchan Aruch, Graetz' History of the Jews, Herzl's The Jewish State, Ahad Ha-am's Essays, and Bialik's poetry.

The editors entrusted each of the twelve volumes included in "The Great Jewish Books" to a competent scholar, who deals briefly with the author, the historical setting of the work, and its purpose or aim. We are then introduced to the book itself, or more correctly to choice and characteristic selections—a simple and effective procedure.

The Bible, which for the Jew and the West is the most important of all books, is justly the first classic to be considered. Dr. Solomon Goldman, the scholarly Chicago rabbi, brilliantly interprets the spirit of the Bible and how it shaped and moulded the Jew, establishing a unique relationship between him and God. And the Bible deals not only with God and the Jews, but also with humanity. Which is the reason why the Bible remains the Book of Books. The Biblical selections include stirring chapters from Genesis, Exodus, Deuteronomy, Samuel, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos, Psalms, Job, the Song of Songs, and last but not least, the Book of Ecclesiastes.

Next to the Bible, the Siddur (Daily Prayer Book) played the most crucial role in the life of the Jew. Rabbi Samuel Rosenblatt discusses the Siddur with reverence, knowledge and understanding. His introduction touches on the history of the volume, its several divisions, and the beneficent influence it has exercised upon generations of Jews. That the Siddur was even more familiar to the Jew than the Bible is no exaggeration, since every Jew, even the uneducated, knew the Siddur, which was "the daily companion of the Jewish people."

Rabbi Jacob Agus contributes two vital chapters on the Kusari and the Zohar, respectively. The Kusari is of course the better known and the more popular of the two volumes. Written by the gifted and beloved poet, Yehuda Halevi, who was born in Toledo, Spain, about 1060, the Kusari has remained one of the choicest of Jewish philosophic treatises. The aim of the author is to establish the philosophic and theological superiority of Judaism over Christianity and Mohammedanism. The work is in the form of a dialogue between a rabbi, a Moslem savant and a Christian, with the rabbi defending his faith with deep conviction, logic and love. The selections emphasize the poet's love for Israel, for the Torah and God, a love which for him, as for all loyal Jews, is validated by reason.

The Zohar, authored by Simon de Leon in 1280 and attributed by him to the saintly Rabbi Simon bar Yochai, is the "bible" of the Kabbalists. In view of the fresh interest in Jewish mysticism, the scholarly presentation and the selections will intrigue many. The Zohar testifies to the fact that man does not live by reason alone, for it has nourished and sustained thousands of Jews with a food more satisfying than bread.

The Moreh Nebuchim (Guide to the Perplexed) by Maimonides, is the most significant volume in Jewish philosophy. Rabbi Jacob Minkin, a gifted stylist, writes an absorbing essay on the author, Moses ben Maimon, and on this major philosophical work. The selections from the Guide will provide delight and profit to those who are not afraid of philosophy. A splendid example of the triumph of reason over faith is represented by Ahad Ha-am. Rabbi Harry Essrig describes the passion of this foremost Jewish thinker of the recent past for social justice, for truth, morality and honor. Ahad Ha-am's essays are as challenging today as when first penned.

To write any kind of an acceptable essay on the Talmud is an achievement, and the one which Dr. Federbush contributes is notable. Violent persecution was frequently visited on the Talmud, which consists of roughly six thousand folio pages, composed over a period of a thousand years, with two thousand Babylonian and Palestinian scholars participating. The first burning occurred at Paris in 1244, and various Popes in the Middle Ages issued bulls forbidding the Jews to read the Talmud. Alas, what the enemies of the Jews and Judaism could not accomplish, time has. The Talmud has virtually disappeared from Jewish life, and is a sealed book to all but comparatively few Jews. Which is deplorable beyond words. The necessarily brief but choice Talmudic selections will be read with interest.

The Shulchan Aruch (Code of Jewish Law, c. 1564) which [illegible] our own age has enjoyed wide acceptance among Jews, is analysed by Rabbi Oscar Z. Fasman, a scholar of repute, who heads a Talmudic academy in Chicago. He tells of the author, Joseph Karo (1488-1575), who compiled the code, describes its general division and contents, and provides several interesting excerpts. While a more critical approach might have been more profitable, the analysis is basically correct.

Hainrich Graetz (1817-1891) has exercised an enormous influence on the science of Judaism. Though not quite up to date, and marred occasionally by personal prejudices, his A History of the Jews remains to this day the best and most authoritative record of Jewish life. Dr. Solomon Grayzel's essay on this foremost Jewish historian and his unique six-volume achievement will be read with interest. That it will always continue to "inspire, inform and to some extent encourage research," as Dr. Grayzel predicts, is beyond doubt.

Theodor Herzl (1860-1904) has become a household word amongst Jews. In addition to being a statesman, the father of political Zionism was also a gifted man of letters. The vision of the Jewish State which Herzl saw is recorded in Judenstaat (The Jewish State), a small volume of no more than seventy pages. Dr. Joachim Prinz compares the impact of this small book to that of Marx's Das Capital and The Communist Manifesto, and the comparison is no exaggeration. The Judenstaat is not only a blueprint for the Jewish State, but—and this is as important—a penetrating analysis of the nature of anti-Semitism. Herzl came to his Zionism via his conviction touching the permanent and ineradicable nature of Jew-hatred in Christian society. To Herzl, anti-Semitism was "a reaction to the existence of the Jewish people." The only sound and permanent cure for the disease was the establishment of a state where this people could live its own life.

The last volume among The Great Jewish Books is Chaim Nachman Bialik's (1873-1934) poetry. Menachem Ribalow, the editor of the only Hebrew weekly in the United States, Hadoar, a gifted critic, analyzes the unique creations of the poet, who has been compared with justice to Yehudah Halevi. Few possess a deeper appreciation and knowledge of Bialik than does Menachem Ribalow, of the poet's genius, of his works, and of his enduring message. By selecting those compositions which have made Bialik loved and revered among his people, Mr. Ribalow makes the poet relevant and alive for contemporary Jews. And each excerpt is prefaced by an admirable comment which clarifies the text and the author's purpose.

The introduction to the volume by Dr. Ludwig Lewisohn is noteworthy, and the bibliography is both splendid and comprehensive. The warning of the editors that the book must not be considered "a shortcut to Jewish learning" should not be overlooked. They express the fond hope that their effort will "stimulate readers to turn to the original sources of Jewish knowledge and inspiration." They have rendered a service to the cause of Jewish learning. To this original and vastly significant volume, of tremendous potentialities for good, I say, God speed.

COUNCIL ASKS STUDY OF DELINQUENTS

Creation of a stage commission to investigate pre-trial procedures, trial, commitment, parole and rehabilitation of youthful offenders was urged by the New York Stage Conference of the National Council of Jewish Women. A resolution unanimously adopted at the meeting said public welfare demanded that the youthful offender be treated so that he might become "an accepted, useful and valuable member of the community." Present treatment for juveniles does not always accomplish these aims, the resolution added.

About 125 delegates also discussed the organization's program of education and social action, service to foreign born and overseas projects, and community relations. Child care services, recreation centers for the aging, mental health centers, school lunch programs and day and summer camp programs also were discussed.

The Arab News Agency reports that "controls to prevent the infiltration of Jews" into Syria have been tightened after incidents which compelled the Public Security Officers on the Syrian-Lebanese frontier to prevent a number of Jews from entering Syria. They "pretended they were tourists and not Israeli nationals".

Jew, Christian Get Interfaith Honor

John Foster Dulles, former Ambassador-at-Large, and Samuel D. Leidesdorf, head of Samuel D. Leidesdorf Company, public accountants, and a civic and welfare leader, of New York, will be honored at a dinner held in New York, of the National Conference of Christians and Jews on May 12 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. Dulles, who resigned recently after nearly two years of service as a policy adviser on foreign affairs to the Truman Administration, will be honored for his work in the prosecution of a bi-partisan foreign policy, and particularly for his architecture of the Japanese peace treaty.

The dinner will honor Mr. Leidesdorf for his forty years of public philanthropies. He is the former president of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies; honorary vice-president and a member of the administrative Committee, and a member of the executive committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He is also president of the Pershing Square Building Corp. and chairman of the board of Sterno Corp.

While honoring the two men individually, the meeting will also recognize their "devotion to the cause of promoting understanding and good will among Protestants, Catholics and Jews," according to Whitelaw Reid, editor of The New York Herald Tribune, who presided at the planning meeting as chairman of the dinner committee.

The challenges offered by Communist and Fascist dictatorship are making possible in this half century the greatest gains in inter-group relations in history, Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said at the opening session of Boston University's three-day founders institute. Dr. Clinchy declared that a new element has entered the struggle against discrimination.

"People are unwilling to take fatalistically any longer the discriminatory practices of the ages," he said. "Beneath the headlines of today's news there lies a determined struggle by mankind against four enemies. They are illiteracy, poverty, misgovernment and discrimination."

Airlift To Take Sheep 10,000 Miles To Israel

The modern technique of the airlift will be used to revive in Israel the ancient industry of sheep-raising which was the economic backbone of that country when young David roamed the land with his herds. Economic Horizons, monthly publication of the Economic Department of the Jewish Agency in New York, announced that 1,200 sheep will be transported from Australia to Israel by an unprecedented airlift to replenish Israel's depleted stock. The venture is a result of the endeavors of Dr. Solomon Goldberg, prominent Australian surgeon and sheep rancher, who has leased 1,000 acres in the northern Negev which he intends to develop into a grazing area.

Dr. Goldberg owns 3,650 acres of sheep land in Australia and has earmarked $280,000 of his own for the development of his grazing project in the Negev. He is now in the United States to enlist additional support for his venture which involves supplying and financing such materials as steel fencing-posts, barbed wire, wire netting, a forage clipper and materials for storage silos.

The airlift begins in May when a specially fitted plane chartered from the British Overseas Airways Corporation brings the first shipment of 50 sheep from Australia to Israel. The entire operation is expected to extend over a period of 12 to 15 months. This will be the first time so large a number of sheep will have been flown over a distance of 10,000 miles. Up to the present, only 20 to 30 sheep at a time have been flown for distances no greater than a few hundred miles. The airlift was necessitated by Egypt's blockade against Israel-bound goods through the Suez Canal.

The Australian sheep are of the Corriedale breed which is well-suited for the climate and soil conditions prevalent in Israel. Israel has at present some 36,000 sheep against 500,000 prior to the Arab invasion when Palestinian Arab herdsmen fled with their flocks across the borders. The sheep now in Israel are of a poor quality. Their wool is very coarse, suitable only for carpet-making, and their meat is poor. Their milk is used for cheese-making.

Dr. Goldberg, who is giving up his medical practice to devote full time to his sheep venture in Israel, believes that with proper farming methods Israel can build a stock of a half-million sheep in a few years, yielding about $12,000,000 worth of wool annually and double the present official meat ration. They would be grazed on existing citrus and olive groves where grass is plentiful and where farmers are anxious to run sheep in order to obtain manure. At present the 1,000 acres in the Negev, loaned from the Jewish National Fund, would not support 100 sheep, Dr. Goldberg said, but he expects that after two years of irrigation and feed-growing, the tract will be able to support 4,000 sheep.

Dr. Goldberg was born in Rishon-le-Zion, Palestine, in 1901, but his parents moved to Australia when he was three. The idea of expanding Israel's sheep-raising came to him on a visit there last spring when he noticed tremendous amounts of grass going to waste in olive and orange groves. After discussing the matter with the Agricultural Department of the Government, he was granted a 99-year lease by the Jewish National Fund for a 1,000-acre area at Dorot, 20 miles east of Gaza. He can be reached through the Economic Department of the Jewish Agency, 16 East 66 Street, New York 21, N.Y.

NAZI VICTIM BREAKS VOW, TO SPEAK IN GERMANY

Just fifteen years ago Dr. Bruno Kisch, a native of Prague and Professor of Physiological Chemistry at Cologne University, fled to escape Nazi persecution. He vowed he would never return, and settled in New York to become one of the world's foremost cardiologists.

He has broken that vow and sailed for Europe. "My decision to revisit Germany," he explained, "was made after much thought and only after a direct plea from the Bonn Government. I will deliver the opening address at the silver jubilee session of the German Cardiological Society at Bad Nauheim."

A pioneer in electronic microscopy, the 60-year-old heart specialist was a founder of this society, which he describes as the first of its kind to be established in Western Europe. He is now president of the American College of Cardiology and a professor of chemistry at Yeshiva University.

The cardiologist, accompanied by his wife, will lecture at a number of universities in Italy and before the Royal Microscopical Society in London, of which he is a fellow. He will return to New York to deliver the opening address at the annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology on June 5.

Brought Books To Jewish Museum

In from Palestine with an exhibit of books for the Jewish Museum in New York was Moshe Gordon, director of the Bialik Institute, Israel's national publishing house. There are now about fifty commercial book publishers in Israel doing (as of 1950) 920 titles a year, of which about 120 are religious. The book-reading population of the country is estimated at half a million, and among them they support some 200 bookstores, two book clubs, and Mark Twain, who is one of the most popular authors in Israel.

Only about a fourth of the annual book production represents translations, but of these English and American authors lead all the rest. There thousand copies is an average sale, and 12,000 is considered spectacular. However, prices are low in comparison with other commodities — from $1.25 to $2 for novels and about twice that for non-fiction.

Mr. Gordon, whose institute sticks to contemporary belles lettres and the classics, thinks the home-grown authors are beginning to make themselves heard in Israel — Deborah Baron, the short story writer; S. Agnon, whose novel "Yesterday and the Day Before Yesterday" was published in New York (in Hebrew) by Schocken; the poets, Fichman and Shlonski, and a young man named Nathan Alterman, whom he described as the "new generation."

"Every nation must have its younger generation of writers," Mr. Gordon said, "even a young nation." A lot of books are still imported into Israel, including Russian. The most popular indigenous books at the moment are memoirs of the Arab War; ninety titles at the latest count.

Two thirds of the Jewish refugees (about 1600, mostly from Germany) who sought asylum in Holland between 1933 and 1939 have been granted naturalisation, according to a statement by the Netherlands' Ministry of Justice. The remaining 800 applications are "being absorbed in the naturalisation bills before Parliament".

THE TOMATO WITH "Yichis"

Heinz insists on tomatoes with "yichis" —tomatoes with an impressive family history. Pedigreed seedlings are reared in special hothouses; they are transplanted and tended by specially chosen farmers. Cooked the old-fashioned home way, blended with rich, heavy cream, these "Aristocrat" tomatoes make Heinz Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup a "meichel"—truly "a milchige meichel for a mayvin." No ingredients used, contrary to Jewish Dietary Laws!

YOGURT IS NEW POPULAR HEALTH FOOD

Yogurt, the national food of Bulgaria, which started out as a gourmet's delight, has developed into a nationally-popular eating habit in Canada. This new accompaniment to the diet is a milk preparation infected with a special bacillus, which the Bulgarians believe responsible for the fact that it's not uncommon for men in their country to live to be 110. Dr. A. Donoff, a forty-two year-old Bulgarian doctor who operates the Montreal North factory of Vita-Yogurt Products, says that Illia Metchnikoff, the great Russian biologist, first spotted the value of keeping Bulgarians hearty and healthy. Yogurt is used in all hospitals in Bulgaria as a regular part of the daily diet. Here, yogurt is commonly eaten as is, in six-ounce portions, and topped with maple syrup; or used as a topping for salads, jelly desserts, fruit, etc. Professor Assen Todoroff Kantardjieff, former director of the Institute of Dairy Bacteriology, at the University of Sofia, makes his own cultures in Montreal. He says that consumption of this product is mounting all the time; and that ten thousand jars a day, at least, will be eaten in Montreal.

Former D.P. Gives $10,000 To Columbia

Leon Jolson, who came to the U.S. from Poland five years ago penniless, was sworn in as an American on Brooklyn Federal Court and then announced he was giving $10,000 to establish a fellowship grant at Teachers College, Columbia University. He said the gift was being made in appreciation of getting his citizenship papers.

The new citizen is the founder and president of the Necchi Sewing Machines Sales Corporation. He and his wife, Ann, were among the 247 new citizens sworn in by Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers. There were 142 women and 105 men in the group. They came from thirty-two countries.

In making the announcement at the office of Ernest A. La Mothe, district supervisor of immigration and naturalization, Mr. Jolson said he was stipulating that the money be used for two two-year fellowships for qualified refugees or displaced persons. He also said that university officials had promised that the fellowship would be awarded without regard to race, religion or nationality.

Mr. Jolson, who is 38 years old, came to the U.S. with his wife in February, 1947. He carries a tattooed number on his left arm, a reminder of three years in a Nazi concentration camp. While learning to speak English he and Mrs. Jolson lived on $90 a month given to them by a Jewish relief agency.

Mr. Jolson borrowed $2,000 to set up an American agency for the sale of Necchi sewing machines, an Italian product. He said his concern expected to gross $10,000,000 on the sale of the machines in America this year. Mr. and Mrs. Jolson live with their 5-year-old daughter, Barbara, at 110-60 Sixty-seventh Road, Forest Hills, Queens.

Galician Made First J.N.F. Box In 1902

In the year 1902, the editorial office of "Die Welt", the official organ of the World Zionist Organization, received a registered letter from a Mr. Kleinman, of Nodvorna, a small town in Eastern Galicia, which read: "After reading the decision of the Zionist Congress to establish the Keren Kayemeth Leisrael, I decided to do something practical to carry out the idea of redeeming the land with 'penny after penny'. I made a special box with the name 'National Fund' on it, and set it up in a prominent place in my office. The results so far have been very encouraging. I would therefore suggest that others collect contributions for the Keren Kayemeth in this way . . ."

This was the first of a stream of similar suggestions that flowed into the editorial offices of "Die Welt", under the powerful stimulus of spontaneous mass reaction and the desire to help realize Jewry's age-old dream. Zionists of that day, individually and en masse, actually created the Jewish National Fund's most popular collection device, the famous blue-and-white Box. In Galicia, Mr. Kleinman constructed a box. In Heidelberg, Professor Hermann Shapira had a box made to order, even before the Fifth Zionist Congress sanctioned his idea of a Jewish National Fund. In a Russian village, in an Austrian township, in fact wherever there was a Jewish community, boxes were made for the small contributions towards the redemption of land in Palestine.

In 1904, seeing the great popularity of this collecting device among the Jewish people everywhere, Johann Kremenetzky, who was appointed by the Fifth Zionist Congress to organize the practical activities of the JNF, ordered the first design of the blue-and-white Box. As soon as these official boxes appeared, Theodor Herzl took one and placed it on his desk in his library. That same box can be seen, in its traditional spot on the memento-crowded desk, in the Herzl Room of the Head Office in Jerusalem. In the years that followed, the Blue-and-White Box became a familiar fixture in hundreds of thousands of Jewish homes, shops, offices and schoolrooms. Through it $10,000,000 was collected for the Jewish National Fund.

In 1924, there were 1281 deaths from diphtheria. In 1950, there were 49 deaths from the same cause. Most of the credit for the reduced death toll must go to the immunization that protects children from this terrible contagious disease, a protection that every little child should have.

So Little Time

The days intervening between Passover and Shavuoth are designated as days of "sephira". In accordance with the biblical injunction we count these days commencing with the second night of Passover until we reach the Feast of Weeks. "And ye shall count unto you from tomorrow after the day of rest, from that day that ye brought the sheaf offering of the waving; seven weeks shall there be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh week shall ye number fifty days." (Leviticus 23:15)

The counting of days is a beautiful way of teaching us the value of time. What is time? Many are the definitions. One thinker speaks of time "as the stuff life is made of"; another defines time "as a sandpile in which we run our fingers"; and still another speaks of time "as the soul of the world." Benjamin Franklin said, "time is money". However we choose to define time, of one thing we are all certain, that the day is short. As human beings we measure events by time and realize that time is, indeed, short!

Youth dislikes the phrase "time is short." For youth is dedicated to the future and is enchanted by the view of distance. It hardly thinks in terms of the past. Yet the first twenty years in a person's life are the longest he will ever know. The golden years of youth speedily pass on before they are even well begun. How important, therefore, it is that youth make the years count for the finer things in life and learn to make the best possible use of time. Well has the religious sage admonished, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

Alas, living in the kind of a world we find ourselves, in which materialism dominates, youth is so often driven to neglect idealism and the spiritual values of life. Yet without these and the cultivation of these in the days of youth, we move into a life of maturity which has no poetry and no song, with the result that life may become an animal existence clothed in human garb. Very early must youth learn to be jealous of time. History records how the noble sons of men have ever guarded precious time and in early youth made unique contributions to human welfare.

Certainly, when we reach middle age we soon discover how time is fleeting. And yet it is most important in this period of life to be of good courage and cheer despite the disappointments and the loss of enthusiasm which we all experience. For what human being is there who has lived forty years and has not made mistakes? All the more is it vital that in this period of life we take on renewed strength, build for certainty, and move forward in enrichment of our soul life.

"Cast me not aside in the time of my old age," cries the Psalmist. What a human cry and how well we understand it. For old age often means poverty and sickness and feebleness and helplessness. It is therefore but natural that men fear old age. However, old age can be a joyous experience if we are given the chance to grow old graciously. The time of old age should be a period for meditation and reflection upon life. We know of such lovely humans who possess the peace of God and are able to make old age a blessing for themselves and for those in whose midst they dwell.

How many of us count our days in terms of our Jewishness? Here is our precious heritage, Judaism! How well do we daily give of our personal service to the cause of our religion upon which hinges the very salvation of humanity? Multitudes among us spend their days in naught and in the meaningless and in the mere getting and spending. Few, indeed, there are among us who in these days meditate over Torah. Few, indeed, there are among us who engage in the personal service of visiting the sick, the lonely, and the broken-hearted.

What shall we say about the art of prayer and worship which seems to have faded out to such a large degree among us moderns? Yet we know there can be no religion without counting days in terms of meditation and in terms of spiritual culture. We have so little time for these abiding values of life. How important it is that we use time wisely and that we waste not our days.

Somehow, the trouble with all of us is that we seem to know only one kind of arithmetic and that is the counting of money. We fail in the art of counting time. "So little time" but enough in which to make life noble, livable and lovable if we but live courageously and walk during our short pilgrimage on earth in the ways of God, the Eternal and the Timeless One.

We were once struck by a painting of a door with crepe hanging on the outside. A hand was reaching out for the knob of the door. The artist indicated the meaning of this painting by the following description: "That which I should have done I did not do." The friend we neglected to visit in time of sickness by postponing the visit in the meantime passes on to the great beyond. What about the letter we fail to write to a dear one who is waiting for word of cheer that never comes? How negligent we all are with time and how truly we fail to budget this most precious possession of life!

"We live in deeds, not years, in thoughts, not breaths,
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count life by heart throbs.
He lives most,
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, and acts the best."

SUSPEND

meeting of the Israel Foreign Affairs Committee was called following the suspension of the German-Israel indemnity talks held in the Hague when Israel refused to accept the German compromise offer of $750,000,000 indemnity for the resettlement in Israel of victims of Nazi persecution. The Israel delegation made it clear that it would refuse to bargain on its minimum demands of one billion dollars indemnity.

Representatives of the West German Government have been trying to deduct the indemnity payments to Israel from the reparations it owes foreign countries. West German officials announced that the Adenauer government "still has the utmost desire to make reparations to the Jews," but claim that Israel should take into account Germany's inability to pay. This claim has been looked upon with scepticism in Jerusalem where officials point out that German exports have risen from $225,000,000 to over four billion dollars in the last five years. The German standard of living, it is pointed out, is far higher than that prevailing in Israel, and any effort to whittle down the indemnity claim will be vigorously resisted. Talks are scheduled to be resumed on May 19.

"It's simply that contributions of money," explained Rabbi Marton, "have not been as numerous or substantial as before, and many of our students have not been able to meet all their obligations. While the situation is desperate, I hope it will not reach the stage of having to close the seminary."

tain that we completely purge ourselves of any prejudice against Protestants and Catholics." Mr. Straus said that not only would the economic theories of Communism "ruin the world" but that its crass materialism challenges the spiritual philosophy of democracy, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

"We must keep our own basic belief of the worth of the individual, which, of course, comes from our conviction that God is the Father and we are brothers then we must fight the good fight against every form of prejudice. Prejudice, the raising of one man's hand against another because of that man's religion, or color, or national origin gives great joy to Communism.

"To the extent that we practice brotherhood, to that extent will we be strong enough to withstand the onslaughts of the Soviet leaders in this long drawn-out struggle for our freedom, for our right to live as men and not as fearful automata." Mr. Straus said that a good and faithful Protestant, Catholic or Jew is a better free man and that a good Catholic, Protestant or Jew is a good citizen.

Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, also spoke.
